Digital Social Innovation Fair 2017 in Rome

Event created 2 months ago in the OpenCare Research group by LuceChiodelliUB

Dear opencare team,

You may have received an invitation to attend the Digital Social Innovation Fair 2017, an event to gather participants to projects funded within the CAPS action and foster future collaborations. This event will be held in Rome, on February, 1st - 2nd 2017.

The DSI aims at addressing fundamental collective human experience research and innovation challenges, presenting a Manifesto for Networked Innovation and setting of recommendations for policy-makers. According to opencare's own ambitions towards new kinds of policy-making, it sounds important that we get to participate to this event.

Who wants and/or can participate on behalf of opencare? @melancon / @Alberto / @Costantino / @zoescope /@markomanka / @Lakomaa / @Rossana Torri / @Franca

Unidata partner tecnologico di Digital Social Innovation Fair

Evento internazionale in programma l'1/2 febbraio in Campidoglio

Roma, 27 gen. (askanews) -Unidatà sarà partner tecnologico della Digital Social Innovation Fair, evento internazionale sul ruolo del web e della digital innovation, in programma mercoledì 1 e giovedì 2 febbraio in Campidoglio a Roma. Convinta promotrice dell'innovazione tecnologica Unidata condivide lo spiritto che guida la conferenza e, per questo, fornirà il Wi-Fi e il servizio di diretta streaming.

Obiettivo della conferenza sarà discutere e approfondire il ruolo del Web e della tecnologia nell'affrontare le attuali sfide sociali e ambientali. L'evento è organizzato nel contesto del Programma CAPSS (Collective Awareness Piatform for Social Innovation and Sustainaibility) portato avanti dalla Commissione European (programma Horizon 2020), che vede attivi, al momento, 26 progetti transnazionali per un valore di 36 milioni di euro.

La conferenza avrà carattere internazionale e permetterà a innovatori sociali, ricercatori, makers, rappresentanti di progetti europei, policy-makers di tutta Europa di confrontarsi sull'internet dei futuro e sul ruolo che può avere nel migliorare la qualità della vita dei cittadini europei. Parteciperanno, inoltre, esponenti di spicco delle istituzioni, delle università e del mondo dell'imprenditorialità italiana ed europea.

Tra gli altri, Enrico Giovannini, Professore di Statistica presso il Dipartimento di Economia dell'Università di Roma "Tor Vergata" e portavoce dell' ASviS e Flavia Marzano, Assessora Roma Semplice presso il Comune di Roma. L'evento sarà coordinato dal consorzio Europeo ChiC, di cui fanno parte Martel Innovate (Svizzera), coordinatore del progetto, T6 Ecosystem (Italia), Universita' di Salonicco (Grecia), con la collaborazione di Fabrizio Sestini, Project Officer del consorzio Europeo ChiC.

Dati aperti, partecipazione, smart city, trasparenza, trasformazione digitale e software libero. Sono questi i temi su cui Roma Capitale e Barcellona hanno ufficializzato un'intesa sottoscritta ieri, in occasione dell'apertura in Campidoglio della Digital Social Innovation Fair 2017, dall'Assessora a Roma Semplice Flavia Marzano e dalla Commissaria del Dipartimento di Tecnologia e Innovazione Digitale del Comune di Barcellona Francesca Bria.

Il testo dell'accordo, approvato dalla Giunta Capitolina, prevede l'avvio di una partnership tra le due amministrazioni e il supporto reciproco sia in ambito comunitario che internazionale per la realizzazione di progetti comuni sul principali temi dell'innovazione digitale.

"È per noi un grande onore poter collaborare con Barcellona, la città che, già da qualche anno, è in cima alle classifiche sulle smart city a livello mondiale - dichiara Marzano - questa collaborazione servirà da stimolo per riaccreditare Roma nel panorama internazionale".

"Ci impegniamo a promuovere non solo la cooperazione tra le nostre amministrazioni ma anche quella tra le nostre comunità: vogliamo coinvolgere le associazioni imprenditoriali e culturali perché siano parte attiva dello scambio di informazioni e buone pratiche per una smart city inclusiva, circolare e democratica", aggiunge Bria.

Primo passo operativo dell'intesa sarà l'attuazione di una strategia congiunta sulla trasformazione digitale e la migrazione verso il software libero, il cui utilizzo è già stato previsto da una delibera della Giunta Capitolina dello scorre ottobre.

Obiettivo della conferenza internazionale in svolgimento in Campidoglio (1-2 febbraio): discutere e approfondire il ruolo del web e della tecnologia nell'affrontare le attuali sfide sociali e ambientali. L'evento è organizzato nel contesto del programma Caps (Collective awareness platform for sociali innovation and sustainaibility) portato avanti dalla Commissione europea (programma Horizon 2020), che vede attivi, al momento, 26 progetti transnazionali per un valore di 36 milioni di euro. La conferenza mette a confronto innovatori sociali, ricercatori, makers, rappresentanti di progetti europei, policy-makers di tutta Europa sull'internet del futuro e sul ruolo che può avere nel migliorare la qualità della vita dei cittadini europei.

Partecipano esponenti di spicco delle istituzioni, delle università e del mondo dell'imprenditorialità italiana ed europea. Tra gli altri, Enrico Giovannini, professore di Statistica presso il dipartimento di Economia dell'università di Roma Tor Vergata e portavoce dell'ASviS; Geoff Mulgan, chief executive di Nesta, Katherine Milligan, direttrice della Schwab foundation per l'Imprenditorialità sociale; Darko Mankowski, programme officer delle Nazioni Unite; Guido d'Ippolito, promotore della Repubblica italiana delle riforme costituzionali per l'inclusione e il diritto di accesso ad internet.

L'evento è coordinato dal consorzio Europeo Chic (www.capssi.eu), di cui fanno parte Martel Innovate (Svizzera), coordinatore del progetto, T6 Ecosystem (Italia), Università di Salonicco (Grecia), con la collaborazione di Fabrizio Sestini, project officer del consorzio europeo Chic.

di Digital Media - Facebook

Roma 01.02.2017 (Digital Media) — Discutere e approfondire il ruolo del web e della tecnologia per affrontare le sfide sociali e ambientali: è questo l'obiettivo della conferenza internazionale in svolgimento oggi e domani in Campidoglio. Un evento, 'Digital Social Innovation Fair 2017', organizzato nel contesto del programma Caps (Collective awareness platform for social innovation and sustainaiblity) portato avanti dalla Commissione europea (programma Horizon 2020) e che vede attivi, al momento, 26 progetti transnazionali per un valore di 36 milioni di euro. La conferenza mette a confronto innovatori sociali, ricercatori, makers, rappresentanti di progetti europei, policy-makers di tutta Europa sull'internet del futuro e sul ruolo che può avere nel migliorare la qualità della vita dei cittadini europei.

L'evento è coordinato dal consorzio Europeo Chic, di cui fanno parte Martel Innovate (Svizzera), responsabile del progetto, T6 Ecosystem (Italia), Università di Salonicco (Grecia), con la collaborazione di Fabrizio Sestini, project officer del consorzio europeo Chic. A partecipare anche esponenti di spicco delle istituzioni, delle università e del mondo dell'imprenditorialità italiana ed europea. Tra gli altri, Enrico Giovannini, professore di Statistica presso il dipartimento di Economia dell'università di Roma Tor Vergata e portavoce dell'ASviS; Geoff Mulgan, chief executive di Nesta, Katherine Milligan, direttrice della Schwab foundation per l'Imprenditorialità sociale; Darko Mankowski, programme officer delle Nazioni Unite; Guido d'Ippolito, promotore della Repubblica italiana delle riforme costituzionali per l'inclusione e il diritto di accesso ad internet.

Dunque, una occasione per fare il punto su ricerca e innovazione e su come internet possa essere utilizzato per agevolare individui e società nel loro complesso. Quindi un essere umano posto al centro dell'evoluzione. Del resto internet continuerà a essere il protagonista del futuro e sarà necessario comprendere e rimodellare in questa direzione i comportamenti economici e appunto sociali. Per il programma dettagliato e la registrazione, è possibile consultare il sito web della conferenza, www.dsifair.eu.
